PAPER MODEL FROM THE «PAPER ARMY»

HISTORICAL REFERENCE

Medium Tank M4, "Sherman" - the main American medium tank during the Second World War. It was widely used in the American army at all places of hostilities, and was also supplied in large quantities to the allies (primarily Great Britain and the USSR) under the Lend-Lease program. After World War II, "Sherman" was in service with the armies of many countries around the world, and also participated in many post-war conflicts. The M4 was in service with the US Army until the end of the Korean War. The name "Sherman" (in honor of the American general during the Civil War, William Sherman), the M4 tank received in the British army, after which this name was assigned to the tank in the American and other armies. The Soviet tank crews had the nickname "emcha" (from M4). The M4 became the main American tank platform during World War II, and a large number of special modifications, self-propelled guns, and engineering equipment were created on its basis. In total, from February 1942 to July 1945, 49,234 tanks were produced (not counting Canadian-made tanks). This is the most massive American-made tank.

PRINTING INSTRUCTIONS

To print a model of a tank, you need to select sheets of a document with a template, printing is carried out on A4 sheets (international format, 210 by 297 mm), if you have a different paper size, it's okay, you can print on it, the main thing in this case is do not stretch on the whole sheet (violation of the aspect ratio of the sheet), since this will change all the dimensions of the model, if, when printing on a different format, it turns out that there is an empty space on the sheet - let it remain, if the model is reduced in size, this is also not scary, there will be changes insignificant.
